Background

A Wyoming lawyer opposed to federal land, water, and environmental regulations, Hageman prioritized her Trump endorsement in her campaign to unseat Rep. Cheney

Grew up in rural Wyoming with her father James Hageman, a longtime Wyoming legislator; graduated from the University of Wyoming with her bachelor's degree in business administration and her law degree

In her first major legal case, Hageman represented Wyoming in Nebraska v. Wyoming, which successfully protected Wyoming's rights to the North Platte River; in 2004, Hageman started the Wyoming Conservation Alliance to "increase public participation at both the state and federal regulatory level"

In the early 2000s, Hageman worked as counsel for the state of Wyoming, seeking to overturn the Clinton administration's "Roadless Rule," which prohibited road construction and timber harvesting in certain areas of federal land; Hageman's work is credited with the abolition of the rule, and she litigated other cases to oppose EPA and USDA regulations in Wyoming

Served on Republican Liz Cheney's 2014 Senate campaign as an adviser and as a delegate to the 2016 Republican National Convention (RNC) on behalf of Wyoming; was also a member of the RNC's rules committee in 2016
